French Security 'Leaks' Investigation Becoming More Intense

Paris, Oct. 4.

Investigation of France's sensational security "leaks" went into a phase of intensive, but little publicised, interrogation today.

Two former government ministers and a member of the French Parliament were questioned by the Military Examining Magistrate, Major Jean de Resseguier, as investigators sought to get to the bottom of leaks from three meetings of the French Government's National Defence Committee.

Three high ranking civil servants have been charged with acts detrimental to the security of the state and Andre Baranes, a journalist of a left-wing newspaper, has reportedly confessed having acted as an agent for the Communist Party in transmitting records of Defence Committee meetings.

FORMER MINISTERS

Those questioned by the military court today were former Interior Minister and Defence Committee member, Pierre-Henri Teitgen, former Minister for Associated States of Indo-China, Edmond Barachin, also an ex-member of the Defence Committee and Radical Socialist member of Parliament, Andre Hugues.

Hugues had provided shelter for Baranes in a country house at a time when the journalist was being sought by the police, though this was not known to him, according to a statement by the Radical Socialist Deputy.

Meanwhile, reliable sources disclosed that a mysterious "Monsieur Charles," reportedly mentioned by Baranes in testimony before the military court, is in reality Alfred Delarue, an escapee from a detention camp, who made a trip to the United States under the assumed name of Charles Carter last year. He was believed to have been sentenced to detention after the liberation of France on charges of supplying intelligence reports to the enemy. Delarue, believed to be a former police inspector under the German occupation, is being sought by police.

OFFICE SEARCHED

As questioning continued, French counter-intelligence agents searched the offices of the Paris pro-Communist newspaper "Liberation" and the home of its director, Emmanuel d'Astier de la Vigerie. Both d'Astier de la Vigerie and Communist Party leader Jacques Duclos have been summoned to testify before the military tribunal and are expected to appear on Wednesday.

Radical-Socialist Deputy Andre Hugues told newsmen, before appearing for a second interrogation this evening that "in the light of recent events, and in particular the searches which took place today, I feel that I had not helped Baranes at the time when he was in danger he would either have been liquidated or would have placed himself under the protection of the American secret service, which he had asked me to contact for him."

The military court was expected to hear testimony in the next few days from former French premier Joseph Laniel and several other former ministers. In addition, Baranes is expected to be confronted with Rene Turpin and Roger Labrousse, two of the high ranking civil servants against whom charges have been made, and various political figures reportedly mentioned by Baranes in testimony.

SPY NETWORK

Meanwhile, National Assembly lobby reports said that Louis Vallon, a non-party Deputy, planned to question the government on the security leaks in order to put certain intelligence networks and action groups established in organisations, parallel with various public administrations.

Late this evening informed sources said that the journalist Baranes had told counter-intelligence agents that for a period of nearly two years he had received 200,000 francs (about US$750) a month for turning over to police information "doctored" by the French Communist Party. — France-Press.

Paris, Oct. 4.

M. Pierre Mendes-France, the French Prime Minister, told reporters today that the consequences of the French security leakages now being investigated had been "noticeable" at the recent international conference in Geneva, Brussels and London.

He did not elaborate the statement.

The Premier, resting at his home in Louviers, Normandy, after the nine-Power London conference, was being kept closely in touch with developments in the "Diles Affair."

He said if anyone tried to attack the Government on this issue in Parliament, it would be able to retaliate vigorously.

Reports here on Saturday said Communist delegations at the Geneva conference on the Far East earlier this year had secret French military plans in their hands during a crucial stage of the Indo-China peace talks. — Reuter.

Tunisian Leader Released

Monterot, France, Oct. 4. The Tunisian Nationalist leader Habib Bourguiba left here today after spending after two months in forced residence here. He thanked his guards at that country and said: "I will never forget this house (of the 'Grand Hotel') where I was held for 100 days. I shall be grateful to the Tunisian people for their liberation."

Kashmir Issue Must Revert To Security Council

Karachi, Oct. 4.

Mohammed Ali, the Pakistan Prime Minister, has informed Mr Nehru, Prime Minister of India, that the question of the future of the State of Jammu and Kashmir must revert to the Security Council for a solution.

He said this was because direct negotiations between the two countries had failed.

This was revealed today in a White Paper on negotiations between the two Prime Ministers on the Kashmir dispute, covering the period from June 1953 to September 1954, published today. In a 20-page foreword, the Pakistan Government said "It is now for the Security Council to take firm and decisive action to settle the dispute. It has continued to poison Indo-Pakistani relations for seven years. Its solution brooks no more delay."

LETTERS REVEALED

It was authoritatively stated tonight that the Kashmir dispute would be

Brigadier To Command C'wealth Force

London, Oct. 5.

The Commonwealth forces remaining in Korea are to be commanded by Brigadier Geoffrey Munn, who at present holds a War Office appointment. It was announced here today. A War Office announcement said: "As a result of the reduction of the Commonwealth forces which has now started in Korea, it has been decided in conjunction with the other nations concerned that the Commonwealth forces remaining in Korea will be commanded by a Brigadier. The first Commander will be from the United Kingdom, and Brigadier G. R. D. Munn has been selected for this appointment."

Brigadier Munn, aged 44, served in North Africa and Italy in World War II, and became commander of the 48th Infantry Brigade in 1944. He was in Austria after the war and after attending the Imperial Defence College went to the War Office in 1952. The present Commander of the Commonwealth forces is Major-General Horatio Murray. — Reuter.

revised in the Security Council after Mr Ali had conferred with his Foreign Minister, Sir Mohammed Zafrullah Khan, head of the Pakistan delegation to the United Nations General Assembly.

The White Paper included 22 letters and four telegrams exchanged between Mr Ali and Mr Nehru. Their aim was to settle "preliminary issues" for the demilitarisation of Jammu and Kashmir, and the appointment of a plebiscite administrator to supervise a fair and impartial plebiscite to determine the state's future.

Main factors contributing to the failure of the negotiations, according to the Pakistan White Paper, were Indian objections to United States military aid for Pakistan and the identity of the plebiscite administrator. Mr Nehru renewed his suggestion for a joint "no war" declaration on the lines of the recent joint declaration between India and the Chinese People's Republic.

Mr Ali's reply was that his country had been consistently willing to subscribe to such a declaration provided it was made effective by assurances that all outstanding disputes between the two countries be referred to arbitration should negotiations and mediation fail, and that both countries abide by the arbitration award.

The White Paper summed up as follows:

SUMMING UP

"When the two Prime Ministers met in Delhi in August, 1953, and at the end of their meeting were able to issue a joint communique, hopes were raised in both countries that a solution of this dispute might at last be found. The foundation for a settlement that had been said in the communique was, however, gradually undermined by the subsequent Indian attitude. At last, no basis remained for further negotiations, and the Government of Pakistan was left with no alternative but to refer the dispute once again to the Security Council. — Reuter."

HOW THE STARS BEHAVE—BEFORE THEY GO ON

By JOYCE STEWART

LADY CHURCHILL has it. So has Audrey Hepburn and Jane Wyman and Isabella Cooley (the most beautiful coloured girl in the world).

Their personal magnetism makes people in a crowd stand and stare.

In any profession, the fortunate possessors of "it" come to the top like cream on milk.

"It" is that indefinable something termed Star Quality.

Inbred magic

IN a new book, "In Show Business Tonight," Peter Duncan defines "it" as "an elusive, inbred magic that cannot be acquired except by gift from a fairy god-mother at birth."

Mr Duncan should know, for as editor-producer of the BBC's "In Town Tonight" radio and TV programmes, he meets more big names than anyone in Britain.

Sandwiched between Good Advice to the stage-struck and 54 illustrations are some fascinating snapshots of stars and their industry.

He describes their various reactions to first nights or broadcast nerves—"as necessary to a performer as a stethoscope to a doctor." Louis Hayward plays twiddle feet under the tables; John Wayne rubs his sock up and down with one foot; Michael Wilding holds his wife Elizabeth Taylor's hand from the moment they enter the studio until the broadcast is over. And Herbert Wilcox grasps Anna Neagle's hand with such concentration you can almost feel his strength passing into her.

Convulsed

MR DUNCAN asserts that the nervous tension of a star's life, the marathon-like strain to get to the top, followed by the continuous effort to stay there demands the stamina of a boxer and the constitution of a cross-channel swimmer.

A comedian's reputation is the hardest to maintain. The public expects spontaneity from its funny man—proof that he is not just a gag-writer's mouth-piece.

Danny Kaye, confronted with an unexpected BBC audience, as he walked through the studio door, just collapsed. Like a sack at the door post as though the effort was too much for him. He convulsed the audience.

Red Skelton, on the other hand, reacted differently. He opened the door, bowed at the crowd, whooped "Ah, people!" and put on an impromptu, uproarious act.

Jack Benny, however, has script-writers working on each off-stage gag. Even the "spontaneous" crack as he leaves his hotel is most studiously prepared beforehand.

Breezy trip

MR Duncan roams through the entertainment business breezily. These are some of the things he has to say:

On Marriage and the Box Office: They seldom go together where a husband or a wife is famous and the partner is not. The non-starting of the two has to play second fiddle to the clamorous public if the marriage is to last.

The greatest happiness seems to emanate from equally successful partners. Miss Mary Lewis Casson and Mr. David Nye, Thomas and Miss Mary Lewis Casson, and Mr. David Nye, Thomas and Miss Mary Lewis Casson, and Mr. David Nye, Thomas and Miss Mary Lewis Casson.

Secretaries, agents, managers, dressers have to be paid. And clothes and entertaining are the tools of the trade.

Only when a star is high in the firmament can he or she afford to dress casually—like Sir Laurence and Lady Olivier, turning up for a broadcast, he without a tie, she in a pique-hood.

Wanda Hendrix, luscious red-headed Hollywood star, was an exception to both rules. She simply wanted a mink coat, saved up for a broadcast, she wondered if she should pin the receipt to her lapel. "People looked at it and I could see them mentally totting up what sort of price I paid," she said. "Mink seems to be a kind of currency for sin."

On Reaching for Stardom via the Beauty Contest: N's O.K. if you are a Dorothy Lamour or Ann Sheridan—they jumped off that way. But winners need talent and application plus beauty to make the grade. Most often both are lacking. Mr Duncan quotes a typical conversation between himself, as judge in such a contest, and an aspiring entrant.

HER: Why do you go in for beauty contests?

HER: (Giggles, pause) Because I want to be a film star.

HER: Can you act?

HER: No, but I expect I can learn.

HER: Do you think you can be a film star just by being beautiful?

HER: (The answer is obviously "Yes") Lots of film stars started that way.

Old friends

ON English Cabarets and Night Clubs: Only older people (business men in particular) can afford £15 on a night out. That is why most cabarets concentrate on presenting the favourites of the 30's—Boyer, Maurice Chevalier, and Noel Coward.

On Gilbert Harding: Duncan sacked him from his programme (Harding was interviewed) because his personality was too overpowering for nervous newcomers.

He was crestfallen and disappointed over the decision, but rang up Duncan after the next broadcast to say: "You did the right thing. John Eddon does the job far better than I could."

On Stars and Television: Some stars will not gamble their reputations on TV. Ginger Rogers is one. She spent years building up her film career. "One bad TV appearance, perhaps through bad lighting or camera angles—and it's gone," she says.

Others—like Jack Hawkins—accept it as a challenge. He risked his successful film reputation in one night, playing a long, leading performance in "The Public Prosecutor." He was a brilliant success.

Out of order

ON Television itself: It cannot be appreciated unless self-disciplined—expected—it should be an adjunct to, not the pivot of home life.

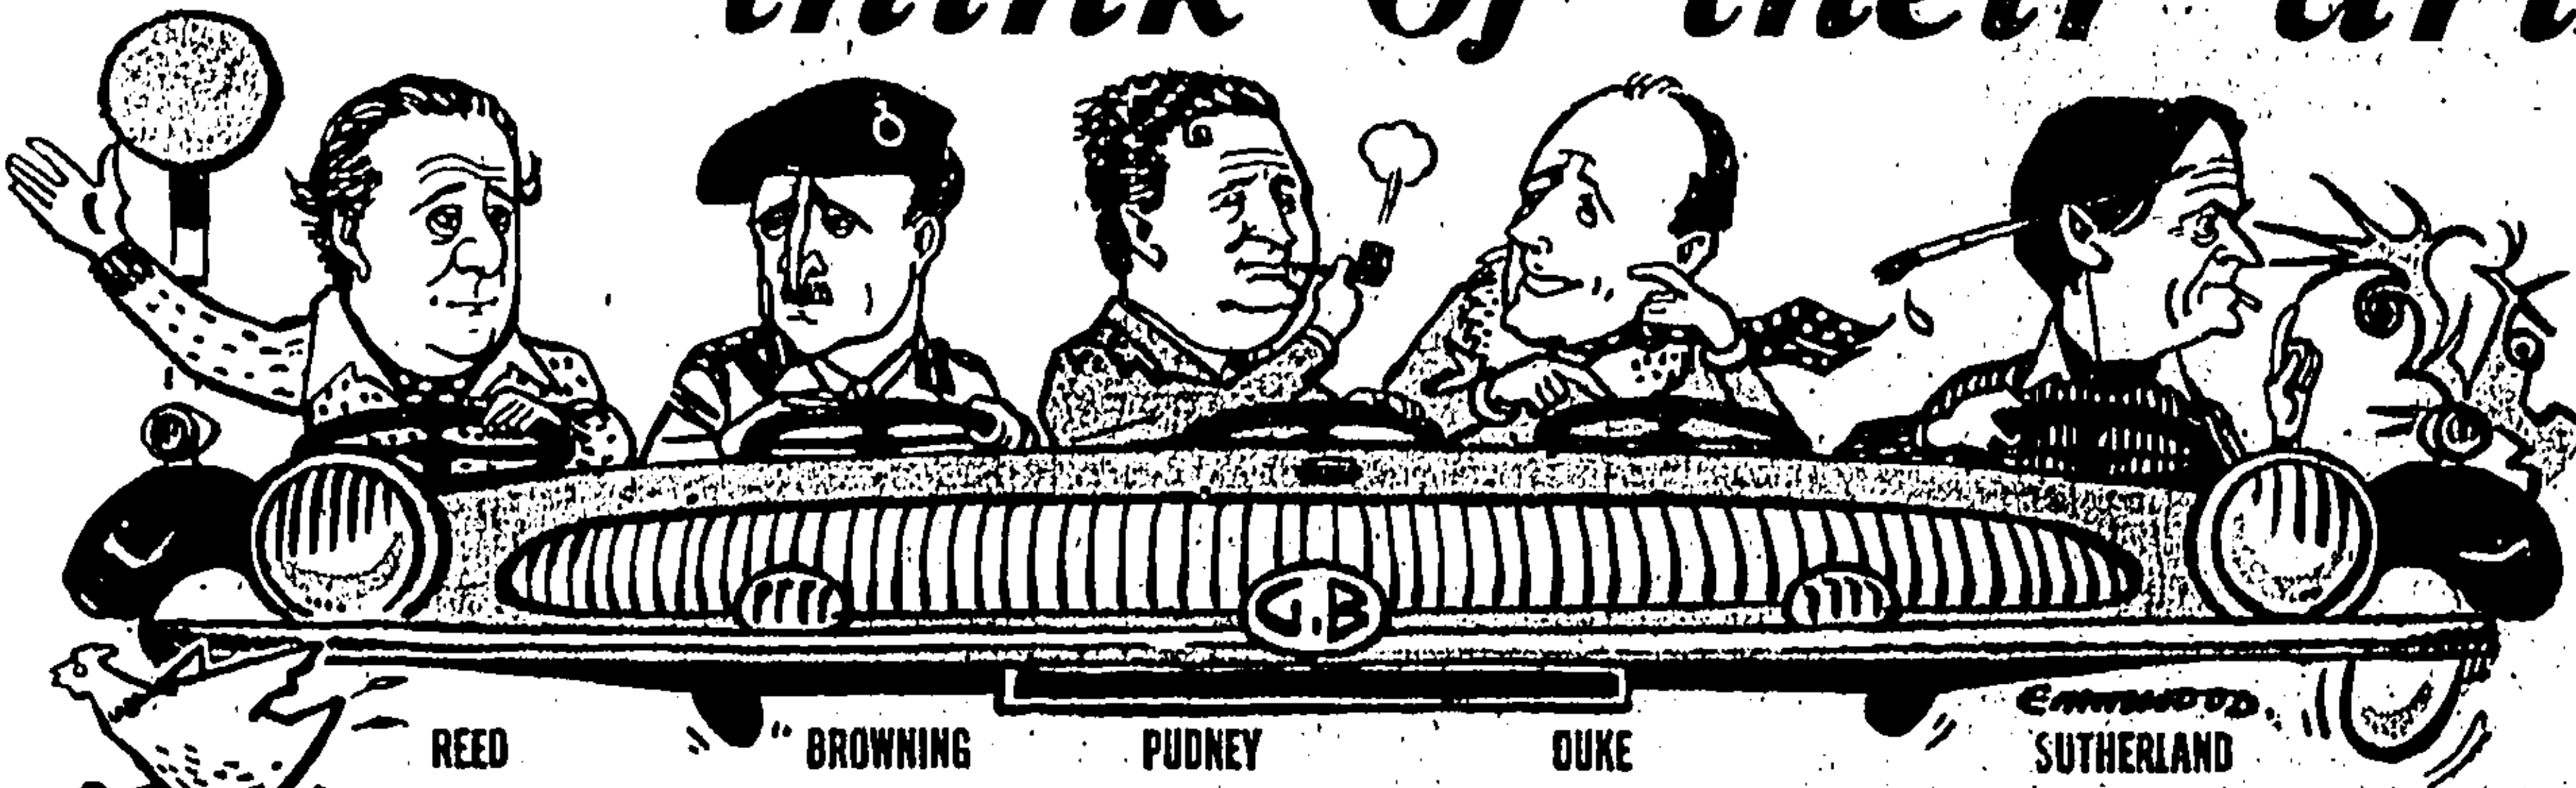

Yet the nation-wide attack on television shows "no sign of disappearing." One typical representative of the normal British father said: "We could not live without our telly. If anything went wrong with the set it would have to be repaired immediately."

When the author's own children seemed in danger of being magnetised to the screen he deliberately put it out of order for the school holidays—and they had the best holiday in the five years since the set was bought. His daughter learned to knit, his son a bit about engineering.

And now, having rediscovered the pleasure of hobbies, reading, and conversation, they are "normal" in their attitude of proportion.

On the Desperado of Comedy: Mr. Duncan, in his book, "In Show Business Tonight," has a chapter on the "Desperado of Comedy." He describes the life of a comedian, from the first steps to the top of the profession.

What we (THEIR WIVES) think of their driving!

Every man thinks he is the perfect driver: here the wives of five famous men tell what THEY think of their husbands as motorists.

by ROBERT GLENTON

DO you drive with a flair? Don't turn to the Highway Code or a driving school for an answer. Ask your favourite passenger... your own personal back-seat driver!

Here are the results of a driving-flair test tried out on five famous men. Their wives were the examiners. Their wives give the results.

Two points stand out:—
1 Graceful driving is like a sense of humour... no man will admit being without it.
2 Criticise his taste in art, clothes, friends and he will put on a superior smile. Tell him his driving is not all it should be... and watch his face fall.

He wants speed

FIRST of the illustrious back-seat drivers to give her verdict was Mrs. Graham Sutherland, wife of the famous artist. A feeling of frustration and a craving for perfection beset the driving of 51-year-old Sutherland. He has been known to swear roundly when straggling, dawdling cars are in front of him. He goes all white and silent when he makes one of his rare noisy gear changes.

As a man who drives a great deal on the Continent, Graham Sutherland is bilingual in his driving. On the Corniche he waves his fists and gesticulates like any Latin when a crazy French or Italian driver imperils him.

In England he gives a thin, resigned smile when he is faced with some foolishness on the road.

He drives a closed coupe, and yearns for something faster. Mrs. Sutherland hopes he doesn't get it. Although she admires his skill, she thinks he travels fast enough.

He likes driving with the hood down. This is unfortunate when the Sutherlands are going to London for an important date. Mrs. Sutherland winces for her new hair-do, her expensive hat. Sometimes she succeeds in getting the hood put up. Often she sighs and searches for a headscarf.

Sutherland is one of those drivers who always believe there is a better place to stop just around the corner.

Mrs. Sutherland points out the first hotel she likes at about six in the evening. Too tired to eat, and vaguely desperate, they eventually find a resting place near midnight.

What she likes about his driving: His skill. The concentration he uses. He says driving is like drawing. Anticipation, an eye to see the right line, steadiness are virtues.

She worries because he will drive with the choke out. She fancies it is ruining the engine. Quickly Mrs. Sutherland edges it in. He looks offended and claims he left it out on purpose.

He's too slow

FORTY-FIVE - YEAR - OLD poet and writer John Pudney is a very different driver, according to his wife. He has undergone a road-change.

When he had a motor-cycle he would kill her on the highway at 80 miles an hour. Now, in his car he will not travel at more than about 40 miles an hour.

The Pudney progress on a long journey is erratic. When Mrs. P. drives she whacks her husband's 40 miles an hour up to 60-plus. He has a habit of slowing down when there is a perfectly clear country road in front of him.

He goes in for quiet, "mum-and-dad" driving, alleges Mrs. Pudney. He swears a little at drivers who wander over the road.

His Virtues: He is a safe driver. He has a wonderful bump of location and never gets lost.

His vices: After a party his speed drops to 20 miles an hour. "Who," asks Mrs. Pudney, "wants to go for a moonlight crawl when you are tired out and aching for sleep?"

And Pudney retorts: "I have never had MY licence endorsed."

He travels fast

GENERAL Sir Frederick Browning, Treasurer to the Duke of Edinburgh and wartime Airborne leader, has a contented back-seat driver in his wife, novelist Daphne du Maurier.

She says he drives just like a chauffeur. He likes travelling fairly fast, and is inclined to do some un-chauffeurly muttering at crawlers.

He gets irritated by drivers who accelerate as he overtakes, but he is a man who looks after his care.

He gets Five Stars for his smooth, jerk-free motoring. He gets No Stars at all for regarding a car not actually caked in mud as suitable for any occasion.

He never stops

NEVILLE Duke, 32-year-old test pilot, is the man with a fast sports car and he believes in using it. The other day he did 700 miles across Europe in one day.

This is discouraging for his wife Gwendoline, who feels it is better to arrive than to travel.

He never stops if he can avoid it. He won't be used for errands. He will never motor into town to do the shopping. He even accelerates when his wife sees a gown shop.

He is impatient with fools on the road. His explanation is that he expects "people to do stupid things in aircraft but can see no excuse for idiots in cars."

He is a good driver. His reactions are shrewd-sharp and he thinks far ahead of the car in front.

But he frets when his wife drives. He accuses her for going too fast.

He gets Full Marks for his concentration.

He gets a Black Mark for his lack of observation where a shop is concerned.

He is immaculate

SIR Carol Reed, 53-year-old film producer, made "Night Train to Munich." Lady Reed—once Penelope Dudley Ward—is not at all surprised.

When he goes driving, he craves silent black roads and the sudden shock of bright headlights.

After a night of driving he arrives for breakfast well-groomed, happy, and unshaven. Lady Reed is crumpled, sticky-eyed, and stiff-necked.

He is a man who likes driving. But 40 miles an hour is his happy speed.

He takes time off to motor round London. He will even drive from his Chelsea home to Ploceville Circus just for the relaxation of motoring. This can get boring.

He is an immaculate driver. His wife cannot recall a crashed gear.

She admires his bland equanimity in traffic jams.

She despises his reluctance to stop driving on his holiday. A place-a-day is his principle. This is irritating if you do the packing.

LYSENKO AND HIS MAGIC LAMP

By David Laidlaw

FAIRY tales, for all their fantasy of plot, are realistic when it comes to emotion, and their heroes and heroines are always doing things we ourselves would like to do. Who, for instance, can read the story of Aladdin without envying him his magic lamp?

Unfortunately, magic lamps are hard to find nowadays, but in the Soviet Union a fairly efficient substitute has been developed. With careful manipulation and the support of the party, a man can make his name into something to contend with.

A good example of this is the case of the scientist Trofim Lysenko, who from 1948 until 1953 was the unchallenged authority on Soviet biology.

to criticise him—usually the beginning of the end in Soviet public life.

Perhaps Lysenko did not realise this, or perhaps, like a wounded animal, he just became more violent because of it. In any case, early in 1948, he gave another energetic rub on the lamp of his reputation, the story of which appeared in Pravda on March 20. It was in the form of a letter from the Chairman of the Supreme Certifying Commission—the body which in Russia is responsible for granting academic degrees—and dealt with the case of a friend of Lysenko's called V. S. Dmitriyev.

Dmitriyev, a biologist, was before had been turned out of his post as head of the Department of Zoology in the Leningrad University. Lysenko's letter was a masterpiece of self-praise and attack. He claimed that Dmitriyev was a "reactionary" and "anti-scientific" and that his work was "unscientific" and "unreliable".

Lysenko's letter was a masterpiece of self-praise and attack. He claimed that Dmitriyev was a "reactionary" and "anti-scientific" and that his work was "unscientific" and "unreliable".

teciot's theories. This was not altogether surprising, since he had had no previous scientific training and was therefore hardly likely to produce anything original.

The chairman of the Certifying Commission advised that Dmitriyev's thesis should be rejected, because it was "scientifically unfounded and methodologically unsound." And after a certain amount of discussion, and a vote, the examination of which the candidate "showed only slight knowledge of the elementary laws of biology," the rest of the examiners agreed with him.

Such a verdict would have been unthinkable a few years previously, and Lysenko's letter was a masterpiece of self-praise and attack.

He even went so far as to call his opponent "Weismannist," which is the most insulting form of abuse in Soviet scientific jargon and was formerly sufficient to condemn a man out of hand. He was supported by a number of other members of the Commission, none of whom, significantly enough, knew anything about botany. The controversial thesis dealt with the origin of weeds. These supporters made speeches of a "generalised and declamatory nature," and in the end the Lysenko faction carried the day.

But Dmitriyev did not enjoy his defeat. For long in a footnote to his professor's letter telling the story of the rejection of his thesis, he was grinding into any student's Soviet brains the fact that he had been called "unscientific" and "unreliable".

BY THE WAY

by Beachcomber

FROM Johannesburg, where I was, "Lady Jonquil Debutti" exclaimed Garth in amazement. But the toast of the Slippery B-I Club lay even more senseless than usual at his feet.

It describes a ballet called "Hydrocarbon Synthesis." The production and choreography are by a man who "trained 50 dancers to demonstrate through ballet how petrol is produced from coal." I am encouraged to go ahead with a functional ballet of my own, built round the story of 15 casual labourers who shore up the wall of a tram depot with old boxes and dustbins, while a beautiful girl dances on the roof with a conductor dressed in a leopardskin, and carrying a bow and arrow. It will be followed by a dancing demonstration of how petrol is extracted from seaweed by the Alubutol process.

Upsadaisy!

IN a ballet about synthetic rubber, a garage mechanic festooned with tyres bounced so high that he stunned himself against the roof, thus recalling the boast of the father of Eliovertina of Ironclaw (when the wine is dark as night, but not so gentle), the famous Basque dancer of the Sept Sauts. Said the old man, "See how my son leaps! If he were not afraid of humiliating his colleagues he would be in the air all the time."

GARTH WENSLEYDALE lit a cigarette, and expelled the smoke from his finely-chiselled nostrils. "I need £100 by tomorrow," said the shabby figure who stood in the little hall of Garth's flat. "So do I," drawled Garth, "but I don't suppose either of us will get it." "I'm in no mood for joking," barked the interloper, revealing a knuckleduster of sinister design. "So I observe," countered Garth, who was trying to think quickly. "If you knock me out," he said, "you will find eight and fourpence in my pockets. You are welcome to it, without resorting to violence." "Don't try the funny stuff," growled the visitor. "As you please," vouchsafed Garth. "Suppose I try the serious stuff. With a swift movement, he kicked his would-be assailant on the ankle, at the same time hitting him hard on the jaw. A tow-coloured wig slipped side-

I SEE that a supercilious critic has been bemoaning at the old musical comedies, because the "plots were not very original." Some 50 years ago Connie Ediss of the Gaiety added the matter by replying to this same sneer: "Were Shakespeare's?"

YOUR BIRTHDAY... By STELLA

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 5

BORN today, you know what hard work means and once you have set out to do something, you accomplish it efficiently and accurately. You are very exacting with yourself—and that means with all those who work with you or for you. You are a natural executive and are at your best when you are supervising a job or making blueprints of it for others. You know how to organize the work, so that it is done most effectively.

You have considerable personal magnetism and this is of great assistance to you when it comes to being your ideas and plans accepted. You are diplomatic and highly analytical. You might make a good politician for this reason. You seem to know what makes a man's mind tick, what motivates his actions. This insight would be very useful in any kind of a public career. You are fond of travel and will see considerable of the earth's surface during your lifetime.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 6

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)—You can count on love and romance. You are a natural executive and are at your best when you are supervising a job or making blueprints of it for others. You know how to organize the work, so that it is done most effectively.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 20)—Personal affairs, especially those involving love and romance, are well advanced at this time. You are a natural executive and are at your best when you are supervising a job or making blueprints of it for others. You know how to organize the work, so that it is done most effectively.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Joe Really Gets Into Odd Position

By OSWALD JACOBY

THIS is the strangest thing that has ever happened to me," said Hard-Luck Joe. "I have actually won a finesse." The situation was stranger than Joe realized. He had won the opening diamond lead with dummy's king and immediately had finessed the jack of hearts successfully.

South continued by taking the ace and king of hearts, discarding clubs from the dummy. He then gave East the queen of hearts. East returned a club, and Joe put up the ace. He eventually got around to trying out the spades, and he then discovered that the bad spade break was enough to defeat the hand. Poor Hard-Luck Joe. He had successfully taken a finesse, and still he had lost his slam.

Strangely enough, he would have made his slam contract if he hadn't tried the finesse at all.

South should win the first trick with the ace of diamonds and lead out the ace, king and jack of hearts. East gets the queen of hearts, of course, but cannot defeat the contract. If East returns a diamond, dummy wins with the king, and South ruffs a diamond in order to return to his hand. Since West's honours all drop, dummy's nine of diamonds becomes established. South has only to draw the last trump and get to dummy with the king of spades to cash the nine of diamonds. If East returns anything but a trump, South can draw trumps, cash three top spades, and ruff a spade, thus establishing dummy's last spade. He can get back to dummy with the king of diamonds to cash the last spade and make his slam in this way.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Clean a thermos bottle by filling with water and adding one teaspoon of baking soda. Allow to stand overnight; since the next morning.

To cover closet accessories, and also to make handsome gift wrappings.

To remove grease or oil stains from any of the synthetic fabrics, rub a thick soap solution on the spot, and rinse with cold running water until the water runs clear. Then wash as usual.

If you're papering a room, save the scrap-ends of the wallpaper. These can be used to cover a wastebasket for the room.

A Relish "Zest Tray" Adds Interest To Meals

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"WHENEVER I pass this soda fountain lunch here on Broadway, every seat is always taken," remarked the Chef. "There must be some special attraction. Shall we investigate, Madame?"

Finally we secured seats and the mystery was solved. It was a food service, new to fountain restaurants: A "zest-tray," passed with pride and flair by the young counterwomen. Every-one welcomed it.

"This is really a version of the relish tray that made tearooms popular, Chef."

"However, Madame, here they use only snappy relishes that add zest to hamburgers, sandwiches and frankies. So, there are pepper relish, mustard pickles, and pickle slices."

"Observe, they are nice and cold, and very easy for any homemaker to duplicate. A compartment dish, or three matching glass pickle dishes on a small tray, and three kinds of homemade or purchased pickles are all that is needed for a 'zest-tray.'"

DINNER

Three-Layer Vegetable Salad Assorted Cold Cuts Zest-Tray Potato Chips Corn on the Cob Peach Cakes Squares Hot or Iced Coffee or Tea Milk All Measurements Are Level Recipes Serve 4 to 6

Three-Layer Vegetable Salad: Cook separately 1 pkg. each frozen cut green beans, frozen lima beans and frozen peas. (If time is short, use fresh substitutes) adding 1/4 tsp. salt and 1/4 tsp. monosodium glutamate to each. The cooking water should evaporate. Chill the vegetables separately.

Then arrange in layers in a shallow bowl, spreading between each layer 1/2 tsp. of a mixture of 1/4 c. commercially soured cream and 1/4 c. tinned tomato sauce seasoned with a little minced fresh mint. Dust minced parsley on top. Garnish with lettuce or chlicory.

Peach Cakes: Melt 1/2 c. butter or margarine. Mix in 1/4 c. granulated sugar and 3 tsp. milk. Separate 4 eggs. Beat the yolks until creamy; then add to the butter mixture.

Next, sift together 2 c. already-sifted enriched flour, 1 1/2 tsp. baking powder and 1/4 tsp. salt. Stir in the grated zest of 1 small orange. Add this to the first mixture. Beat thoroughly.

Last, whip the egg whites stiff and fold in. Spread half the batter in an oiled 7x11-in. pan, spread on 1 1/2 c. small-diced (lined or sweetened) fresh peaches mixed with 1/4 c. granulated sugar, and 1 tsp. cinnamon. Spread with the remaining batter (using a spatula dipped in hot water).

Bake 35 min. in a moderate oven, 350°-375° F., or until a toothpick when inserted near the centre, comes out clean. While still warm, dust the cake with powdered sugar. Serve warm or cold, cut in squares.

TRICK OF THE CHEF

If you have planned cold cuts and the day is chilly, serve "hot cuts." Heat them through and slightly brown in butter or margarine mixed with a little table mustard. Arrange the "hot cuts" on platters the same as you would cold cuts.

Advice From An Eligible Bachelor On CHARMING A MAN

New York. "Act interested in the man and not the place he's taking you," advised a girl. "That's just good manners, and girls don't go out of town as more polite about it than New York career girls."

"Dress simply, especially on a first date. It makes a man uncomfortable when he calls for a girl about only one thing—her career," David Hunt, an eligible young man-about-town, said slyly.

"The 31-year-old president of a coat and suit house would be a good catch in any glamour girl's book, but so far he's escaped. A man quickly tired of the rarefied atmosphere that surrounds a movie queen or a beautiful model, he claims and yearns for some good old-fashioned womanly traits."

"Devote your attention to him, and just don't go out with him again if the two of you don't have a good time together."

Knarf's Friendly Favours

—He Was Happy When All of Them Were Returned—

By MAX TRELL

KNARF, the shadow-boy, was walking down the street, whistling as hard as he could. He was whistling as hard as he could whistle because he was feeling as happy as he could feel.

Finally, on the corner, he met the Policeman. The Policeman wasn't whistling. He didn't look very happy. In fact he looked very sorrowful.

"What's the matter?" asked Knarf.

The Policeman's Complaint

"Well," said the Policeman, "there's something I'd like to do, but I can't do it on account of I'm a Policeman."

Knarf asked in surprise: "What can't you do that you want to do because you're a Policeman?"

"I can't hop, skip and jump," said the Policeman.

"Oh, that's too bad," said Knarf.

"But I just thought of something," said the Policeman. "If you would hop, skip and jump it would make me feel better just watching you."

So Knarf hopped, skipped and jumped, while the Policeman watched him, and that brought Knarf around the corner.

"I hope the Policeman feels better now," Knarf said to himself as he continued on.

He walked only a few steps further when he met a Brown Poodle.

The Butterfly told Knarf it couldn't read a book.

By and by the Policeman came along, the Robin came along and the Butterfly came along.

Knarf Can't Bark

"I'm sad and sorrowful," said Knarf, "because I can't hold up my hand and make automobiles stop. I can't bark. I can't fly. I can't suck honey out of a sapling."

And this is what happened.

The Policeman lifted up his hand and stopped an automobile just for Knarf. The Robin flew just for Knarf. The Butterfly sucked honey out of a sapling.

And this is what happened.

The Policeman lifted up his hand and stopped an automobile just for Knarf. The Robin flew just for Knarf. The Butterfly sucked honey out of a sapling.

It made them all happy to do this for Knarf.

It made Knarf happy to have them do this for him.

FA Muddle Bars Welsh From England-Germany Match At Wembley

By DAVID JACK

Muddle, muddle, muddle. That sums up the ticket distribution plans for football's showpiece match, the England v Germany meeting at Wembley on Wednesday, December 1.

Trouble started when the FA told supporters to write to their nearest Football League club for tickets. Cardiff City fans, however, were unlucky. Their applications were returned—because Cardiff, like other clubs in Wales, are not entitled to any tickets.

Says manager Trevor Morris: "We've been abused by many supporters. Some refuse to believe we have no tickets. Others have asked if any Welshmen fought in the war."

Even English clubs are in the soup. Hull City, for instance, asked for only a few tickets for officials. That was before supporters were told to apply to clubs. Now Hull have received hundreds of ticket requests—with no tickets to supply.

Frank Blunstone, Chelsea winger, was asked for his railway ticket, on a Manchester train recently. His ticket was clipped by his dad, who was the ticket collector on the train.

Northampton Town have received an application for a transfer by Victor Patterson, strongly-built young left-back signed from Middlesbrough two years ago.

Northampton are already looking for scoring forwards and if Patterson goes manager David Smith will need to find another full-back, for the club is not strongly duplicated in this position.

Wolves manager Stan Cullis was the honoured guest at a football match in Ormeau, Dublin, recently. Two select Ormeau sides played a special exhibition to help the Molineux manager in his talent-spotting. It was Ormeau who sent goalkeeper Noel Dwyer to Wolves last season—and the boy has been a big success.

FUTURE STAR

Player of the future is John Armour, 15-year-old inside forward playing exceptionally well for Stoke City—and doing a ground staff job. John is the lad who made front page news when he appeared in court for playing football in the streets of Glasgow.

Memories of Dublin and the Inter-League match. Nat Lott-house complaining that he counted every engine rev on the boat while teammates slept soundly. The Irish official commenting on England's dash from ground to boat: "With steak plentiful in England, they can't leave Ireland quickly enough." My young sister being advised to take a red, white and blue ribbon out of her hair unless she wanted lynching. Tom Finney dribbling towards a corner flag and finding it hidden behind spectators. And, biggest shock of the week—no Guinness in the Gresham Bar.

GREATEST AMBITION

The Queen's success would be highly popular in view of the great interest she has always shown in the turf. It has been one of her greatest ambitions to be Britain's leading racehorse owner. All but two of her stake winners were bred at the Royal stud at Hampton Court.

Though there is no such thing as sentiment in racing and it certainly was not the motive behind the retirement to stud of his Derby and St. Leger winner, Never Say Die, Mr. Clark looks to have thrown away his chance of becoming leading owner this season by doing so.

Never Say Die would certainly have won several thousand pounds more for him had he not suddenly decided to end his racing career. Mr. Clark's reasons for doing so are said to be because he did not wish to be greedy and send the horse round collecting minor stakes and because he wanted to see the progeny of Never Say Die on the race-course. Mr. Clark is now 78.

British breeders are delighted that the American will stand his horse in Britain for at least four seasons.

Though without the services of Never Say Die Mr. Clark may still pass the Queen's total of winnings, his three trainers in Britain, Joe Lawton, Harry Foxcock and Arthur Budgett, are going to run his other horses at every opportunity in order to try and put their patron on top. —China Mail Special.

The Dower-Tuli Fight Looks Like Being Britain's Boxing Event Of The Year

Says JIMMY WILDE

How big can little men be? That old and hoary theory that it's the massive knockouts and ring-shaking of the "heavies" that alone will bring in the crowds seems to be taking a knock right now. For who sends up the temperature of the game in Britain today to heights that even Mr. Solomons must be surprised at?

Don Cockell and Johnny Sullivan—yes, they've done their part. But the fight that looks like being the boxing event of the year so far as Britain is concerned involves two tots in the division I used to fight in—Welshman Dai Dower and that bundle of Zulu energy from South Africa, Jake Tuli.

Already, promoter Solomons is sure of a bumper gate for his October 19 Harringway prospect, Dower. He's been matched against Joseph Roudie of France.

Both Dower and Tuli command wide support among the boxing public. And unpartisan ringers won't know who to pick. I've heard criticism that Dower isn't ripe for such a tough battle yet.

I still think the boy has a lot to learn. But his record doesn't call for cotton wool treatment. He's won through all the opposition set before him—and this is the crucial bout of his yet brief career.

Tuli, the little wonder boy, who became an overnight sensation, has undergone two shake-ups, the most notable being the one slanted out by new World Bantamweight Champion Robert Cohen.

The Dower-Tuli duel isn't going to be one-sided by any means—and it can do enormous damage to British boxing generally.

Who else among the little men has brought new hope? I give you 26-year-old Peter Keenan, the wee Scot who won back the British bantam crown from John Kelly, the Irishman, who took it from him.

Keenan didn't touch world standards, but his victory is already producing talk that suggests Peter is going to get that rare thing—a second shot at a world crown.

Cohen is expected to put his world title of stake against Keenan next year. Cohen looks strong enough to reign for a long time, but the fact that Keenan is in the running for a tilt is enough to whip up interest in a middleweight division which for some time hasn't exactly had a wealth of bright fighting.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS
If it's the small men who are doing most to rouse interest these days it is in the cruiserweight class where the British champion perches most uneasily.

Alex Buxton, who is keeping a stern domestic challenge to go—Albert Finch, Randy Turpin, and that hard-hitting and clever West Hammer, Ron Barton.

Barton, whose professional career is one of the most amazing in the sport.

St. Patrick's Athletic, League of Ireland club, supplied Everton with two useful players—goalkeeper Jimmy O'Neill and inside-left George Cummins.

Now Everton want right-winger Liam Cahill—but this is one signing St. Pat's are determined to stop.

A Glasgow amateur with the Dublin club, Cahill cannot join Everton without permission—and this permission is almost certain to be refused.

W. Leighton Wins Chinese Cup Again

The Chinese Cup was played for over both Courses at Fanling on Sunday under a burning sun which severely tested the stamina of all players.

W. D. Leighton won the Cup for the second successive year by returning a score of 78, four points higher than last year; his best round being a gross 72 over the New Course.

A. R. Petrie was the runner-up with 79 points, and his gross score of 71 over the New Course in the morning, equalled the Amateur record for the Course. Some excellent golf was seen during the day despite the heat and A. R. de Pinna's magnificent score of 43 Stableford points over the New Course is worthy of special mention.

J. L. MacIntyre won the prize for the best Round on the Old Course with a return of 39 points, his second nine providing 22 of these and a gross score of 37. One over par.

RUSSIANS BUY 70,000 TICKETS IN FOUR HOURS TO SEE ARSENAL MATCH

Moscow, Oct. 5.

Football-frenzied Russians besieging Moscow booking offices bought 70,000 tickets in four hours yesterday to see Britain's Arsenal team play Moscow Dynamo on a floodlit pitch today.

The match might be an international championship judging by the excitement it is causing here.

But away from the turmoil the British team tell weekly into early beds last night was: "The boys are well, their near-sleepless, 2,500-mile trip."

Officials of both sides agreed today that substitutes for three players, including the goalkeeper, would be allowed at any time during the match in the event of injury.

They also agreed to use the British diagonal system of refereeing with one Russian on each side of the pitch in Soviet refereeing, both line-men are on one side and the referee on the other.

Alan Stanley, 30, Secretary of the English Football Association, told the Russians the British side would be playing in their own kit.

Moscow Dynamo, who are nearing the end of their season, top the Soviet League table. They have lost 10 games in 1954.

The match will be the second between the two clubs. They met first when the Dynamo made a tour of Britain in 1945. Then in 1946 the Russians won 4-3 over a severely depleted Arsenal team—many of their stars were still in uniform.

Cunard Bosses Boomed At Meeting Row

Liverpool, Oct. 4.
The usual calm of the Cunard Steam Ship meeting was broken here when shareholders booed the directors, headed by chairman Colonel Denis Bates.

The rowdy meeting was called to approve a two-for-three Ploughshare—but shareholders shouted that the issue was "inadequate" and "negligent".
Storm shareholder was 47-year-old London insurance official Lionel M. Childs, who has formed a Cunard Shareholders' Association to press for more for shareholders.

OUT OF ORDER
He got up to read a statement. He started to speak: "You will be glad to know that the Shareholders' Association does not intend to oppose you..."
Chairman Bates cried "Order, Mr Childs." He told him he could only speak for himself—as just a shareholder.
Mr Childs tried to speak—but the colonel would not have it. He ruled Mr Childs out of order, banning him from speaking.
A shareholder shouted: "I object to having our representative having his mouth closed." But the mouth was closed. The Ploughshare issue was then put to the vote—and approved.
As the directors withdrew off the platform shareholders boomed them—and called for three cheers for Mr Childs.

At times the meeting was in uproar, with shareholders shouting unprintable remarks.
The Cunard directors must be worried—for they know the shareholders own the business. And I salute Mr Childs in leading the agitation to get Cunard shareholders a fair deal.
For I doubt whether shareholders would have got even this two-for-three Ploughshare without his opposition.

Britain Taken To Task Over Formosa
London, Oct. 4.
The Peking People's Daily, official organ of the Chinese Communist Party, today took to task countries, including Britain, who it said advocated "neutrality" of Taiwan (Formosa).
"No one who holds that China's territory of Taiwan can be neutralised can be considered as respecting China's sovereignty in regard to Taiwan," the newspaper said, according to the New China News Agency.
"This is as simple and clear as that no stand for the neutralisation of Wales could be regarded as respecting British territorial sovereignty."
The article, by commentator Wu Chan, said British newspapers had been trying to alter the "historically established fact" that Taiwan belongs to China. "Taiwan is China's territory and the Chinese people will liberate this island," the article said.—Reuter.

Modern Science—Our Magic Carpet LOS ANGELES TO ERECT A MONORAIL

By JOE JONES
The facilities and know-how of modern science are being called upon by two major United States cities—Los Angeles and New York—to help in solving their increasingly difficult traffic problems.

In Los Angeles—a sprawling city of more than 4,000,000 people where buses, trolleys and private cars compete for space—plans are under way for building the first rapid transit monorail system in this country. This system consists of cars suspended by two wheels from an overhead rail. It will mean that customers can ride rapidly and comfortably, free from the interference of surface traffic.

Engineers say only one monorail passenger line is operating today. This is in Cologne, Germany, and its cars average 22 miles an hour—about the same as the New York subways. In 51 years the Cologne monorail has carried 800 million passengers with only two accidents—one of them an elephant which fell out of a baggage car.

A NEW DEVELOPMENT
In New York City, traffic officials believe they are on the threshold of an important new development in traffic engineering. It's a plastic-like substance used instead of paint for marking streets and crossings. Developed by a New York chemical firm under a secret formula, this substance will stand up for a long time under the impact of teeming city traffic. Heat doesn't affect it.

Another virtue of the new substance is that it dries so rapidly, applications can be made between traffic light changes, whereas ordinary paint takes about 40 minutes to dry.

Who was the first author to use a typewriter? What pioneer manufactured the first mass-produced sugar-coated pills in the United States?
The answers to these questions have been revealed by recent gifts to museums. Mark Twain, the beloved humorist, was the first writer to use a typewriter. Back in 1874, he was turning out his immortal prose on a Remington Rand "Model One." One of these—first commercial typewriter ever built—was presented by Gen. Douglas MacArthur to the "Mark Twain Study" in Elmira, New York, marking the opening of the annual "Mark Twain Festival" in that city.

SUGAR-COATED PILLS
The man who brought out the sugar-coated pills was William R. Warner, Philadelphia druggist.
The copper pill-rolling pan which he used has been given to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, where it becomes part of an exhibition of early pharmaceutical equipment.
The French were sugar-coating pills in the 1630's. The American pharmacist followed their example about the middle of the nineteenth century, and the people who were tired of bitter-tasting pills welcomed his new "candy-like" medicine with great enthusiasm.
The present-day medical man from Philadelphia—Dr. B. Wheeler Jenkins—proposes that the number of daily doses of medicine should be reduced to a minimum, preferably to one.
He has conducted a survey which showed that most patients do not take the medicines prescribed for them after the first few days—especially when three or four doses a day are required. As a result, their medicine cabinets are cluttered with half-filled bottles and the contents, when used later, may do more harm than good.

Princess To Visit West Indies

London, Oct. 4.
Princess Margaret will visit the British West Indies early next year. It was officially announced here tonight.

Queen Elizabeth's younger sister will travel aboard the new Royal Yacht Britannia to the British Caribbean Islands of Trinidad, Grenada, Barbados, Antigua, Jamaica and the Bahamas.

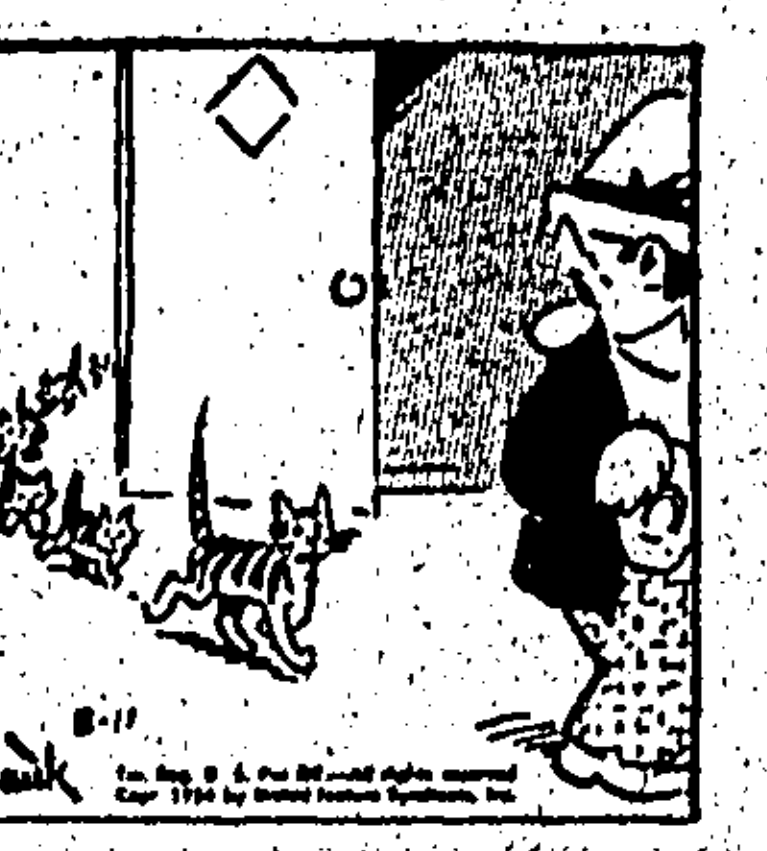

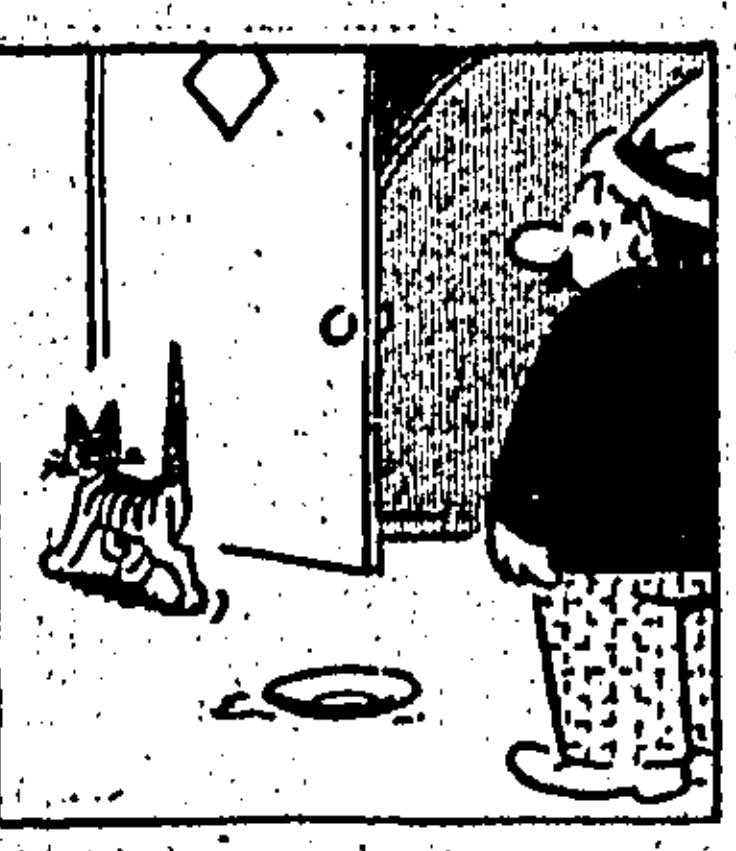

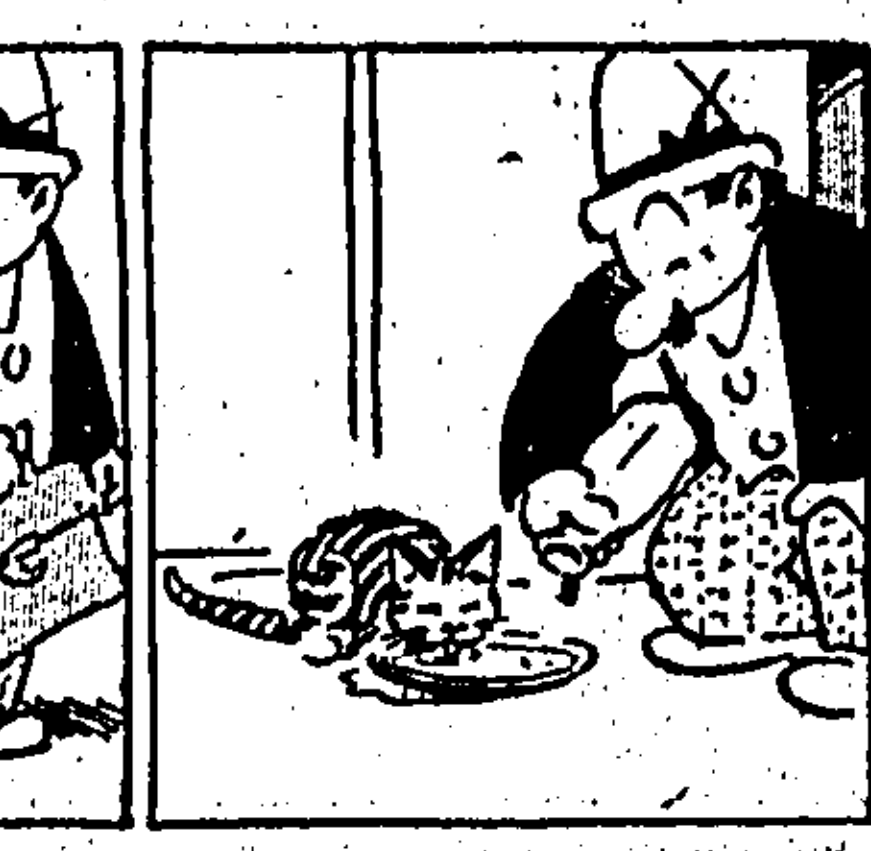

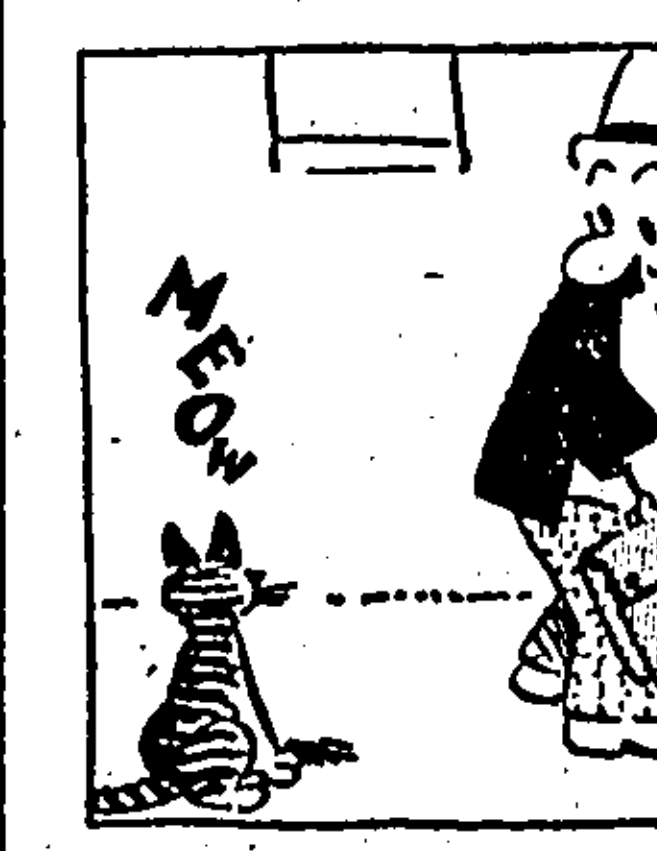

The announcement from Clarence House, where the Princess lives with the Queen Mother, said: "H.R.H. the Princess Margaret has accepted an invitation to visit some of the British Islands in the Caribbean early next year. Her Royal Highness will visit Trinidad, Grenada, Barbados, Antigua, Jamaica and the Bahamas, travelling in H.M. Yacht "Britannia".

"Detailed arrangements for the tour will be announced later." The announcement did not give the date of the trip. Princess Margaret is 24. Her last overseas trip was to the British zone of Germany last July.

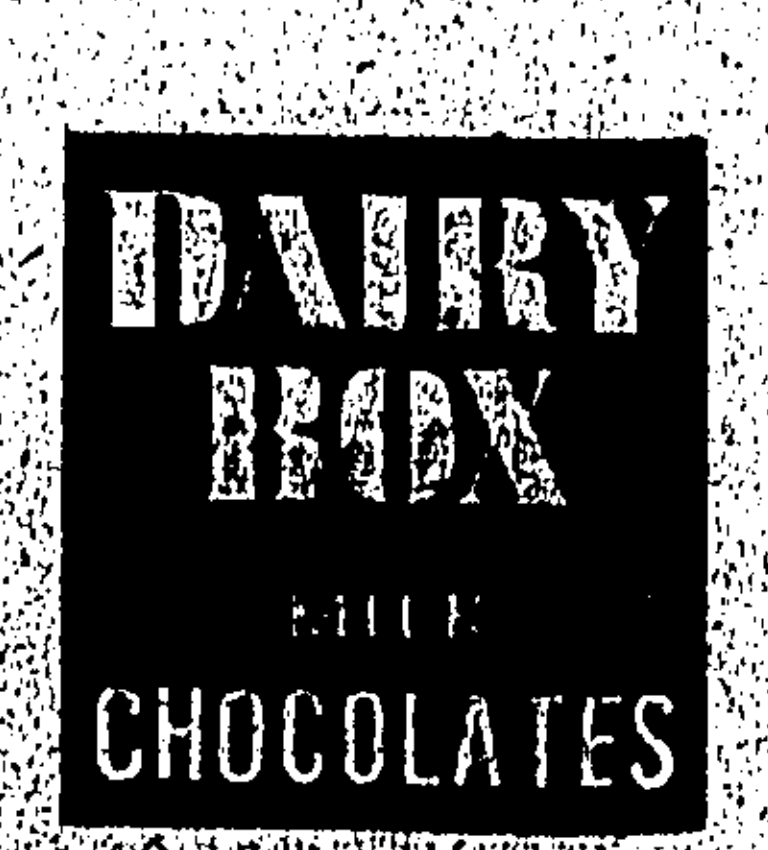

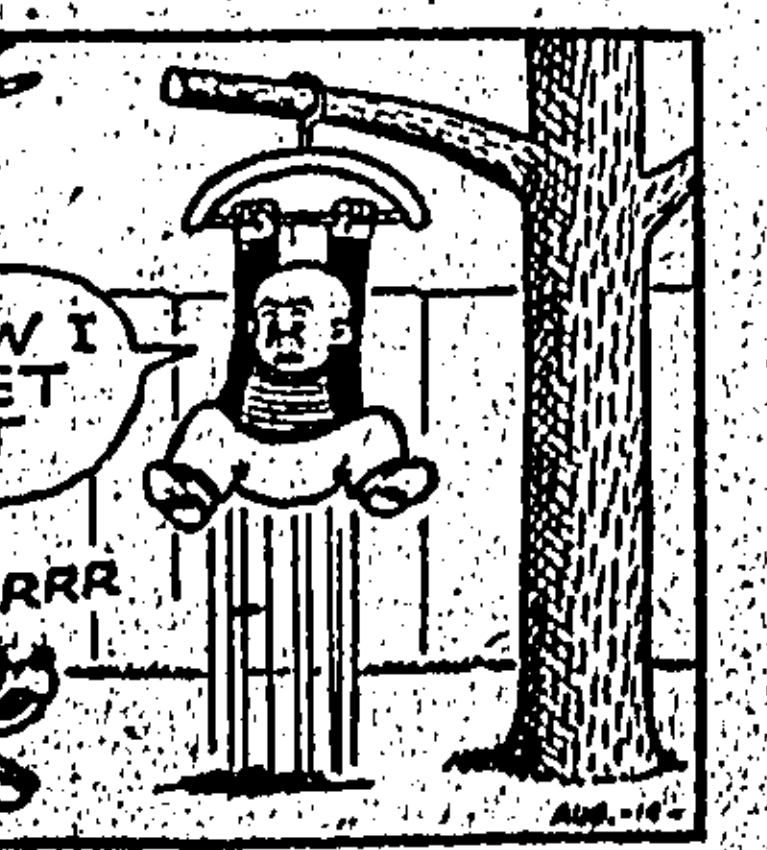

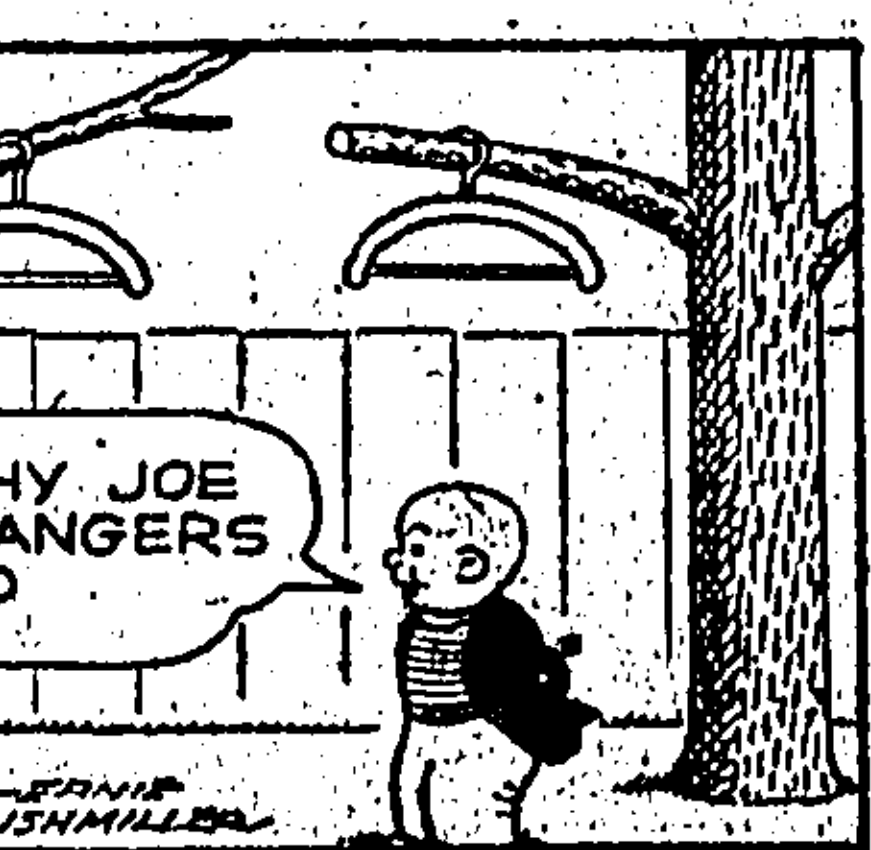

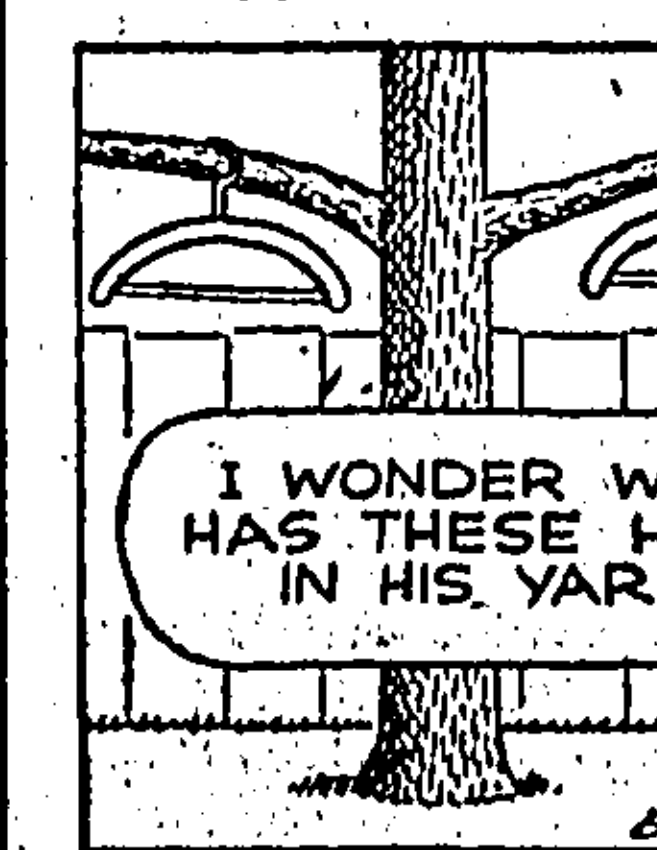

USUALLY BY AIR
The year before, the Princess, who usually makes her journeys by air, went with the Queen Mother to the islands of Barbados, Antigua, Jamaica and the Bahamas. Two months previously, she had been in Cuba for the wedding of Princess Rashid, 23-year-old grand-daughter of King Hassan.

In November, 1951, the Princess flew to Paris on a five-day gap week in between her travels. She was with the Queen Mother and the Duke of Edinburgh. A year before, the Princess represented her mother and another of the "sister-princesses" Queen Juliana of the Netherlands. Princess Juliana is married to Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands.

Japan's Admission To Colombo Plan Likely

Ottawa, Oct. 4. Japan's application to join in the Colombo Plan was reported to have met obstacles today as officials from the 14 member countries opened their annual Colombo Consultative Committee meeting but officials are confident she will be admitted tomorrow.

Authoritative sources said several small Southeast Asian States—including Indonesia—which suffered under Japanese aggression in World War II had "ruled some objections." However, they were confident a decision would be reached tomorrow and said, "The possibilities still are good that Japanese delegates will sit in on the rest of the meetings."

The Prime Minister, Louis St. Laurent, launched the first Western Hemisphere conference of the group this morning.

The question of Japan's membership did not appear on the agenda of the meetings, but Canadian circulated the diplomatic application to get the reaction of the member governments. The protocol of the Colombo organization requires unanimous consent before a new member can be invited to join.

Japan made known her willingness to contribute technical assistance some time ago. If all members agree, it will fall to Canada, as the host country, to invite Japanese delegates to the Committee sessions.

One source said a representative from the Japanese Embassy would be invited to the meeting tomorrow afternoon. If assent can be obtained during the morning session, United Press.

Alleged Murder At Shek Kip Mei

STATEMENT BY ACCUSED READ TO COURT

A statement allegedly made by the accused in answer to a charge of murder was read to the Court when the trial of Leung Hung-on was resumed before the Pulene Judge, Mr Justice Gregg in the Criminal Sessions this morning.

Earlier his Lordship had ruled that statements made by the accused were admissible in evidence. The ruling was given following arguments by Counsel for the Defence and Crown Counsel in the absence of the Jury.

Accused is charged with the murder of his married son, Leung Kai-ming, at Shek Kip Mei Resettlement Area on July 12 last.

Mr A. J. Clifford, instructed by Mr Arthur Lui, of Messrs Lo and Lo, is defending accused. Mr D. N. E. Rea, Crown Counsel, is prosecuting, assisted by Det. Insp. A. Souler.

A MISTAKE
The statement allegedly made by the accused in answer to the charge of the murder of his son read:

"Five years ago my wife, when I was doing business at West Chi Mei, made a mistake and entered a name in the licence. She caused my business to go bankrupt.

"She absconded secretly. At that time I reported the case which was recorded in the Bay West Police Station. In 1952 she asked someone to beg me for a favour (to allow her) to come back to me.

"I had four children and had nobody to look after them, and my business was not making a progress and I could hardly look after the children. I accepted her and she returned to Hong-kong.

BECAME UNEMPLOYED
"Unexpectedly, after the big fire at Shek Kip Mei, I also became unemployed and remained at home all the time. I found out that she did not adhere to the principles as a wife and that she met her sweetheart day and night leaving the house affairs and the children unattended.

"The wages earned by the children were partly given to her sweetheart to spend, with the result that the food for the children was extremely bad. Therefore I warned her once two months ago, when a quarrel took place followed by a small fight. We went to the Police Station to settle our disputes.

"Seeing that she often gave the children's wages to another person, I was often dissatisfied with her. In April I asked that each month $30 should be given to me to spend. She very often tried not to give me a single cent. I had to press every time there were wages before I could get some.

$20 GIVEN
"From April up to now, about $20 were given to me every month. I asked her to pay this expenses openly but she would not agree. Later from June she had asked me to get from the children.

"So recently I did not ask her for money nor did I fight or quarrel with her. I therefore wanted to be patient and wait for the time being, so that wait for there was an opportunity and I had money I could send someone to make inquiries and find out the place where she was to meet her sweetheart. Unexpectedly, on the 2nd instant she, under some pretext, went away from some other place together with the two daughters and I did not know her whereabouts.

"That meant she had absconded secretly and it would be convenient for her to live together with her sweetheart secretly. Because if she were to live together with the children and myself she would be afraid that I would watch her movement. Therefore she went away to live secretly.

"A few days after she had gone away secretly, an elder daughter came back to bring the youngest daughter, age 8 years, to the elder daughter's place to sleep. Finally, I made inquiries from the youngest daughter whether she had seen the mother, and the youngest daughter replied that she had not seen the mother. If she could not be seen in the elder daughter's place, during meal and sleeping hours, I was very confident that she was together with her sweetheart.

"On the 11th as I saw the youngest daughter, I and the younger son not being locked later by anybody, I took her to their godmother's place to be looked after for the time being.

GIVEN TO GODMOTHER
"On the night of the 11th, the elder daughter upon finishing work notified her mother that the younger daughter had returned about one o'clock at night and asked the elder son to ask me about the younger daughter. I replied that as there was nobody to look after her, she had been temporarily given to the godmother.

"I continued to sleep. When the elder son asked me I was asleep. I did not know that his mother had returned.

"The following day, the 12th, at noon she and the elder son returned together to force me to produce the younger daughter. At this time our godmother also arrived. Upon seeing this, the godmother at once returned to bring back the younger daughter. She remained there for about two hours.

"I also declared that she was not permitted to take the younger daughter as she pleased when absconding secretly. She paid no attention.

"Half an hour later, she took the younger daughter out of the door and went to near the junction of the street. I went out to intercept and stop her taking away the younger daughter with her. During the quarrel the elder son hit my forehead with his hand.

"As I saw them two, and that the elder son was strong and had strength, I took out from the inner pocket a small knife. I, in fact, intended to stab and injure both eyes of my wife, but she dodged and I failed to injure them. At the time the elder son followed and embraced me with hands and hit my body and wanted to snatch my small knife with which to stab me back. At this time I in order to defend myself could not help turning around and struck the face of the elder son with the small knife. It was self-defence. I was in a hurry and it was not a plot to murder.

"A MISTAKE"
"Therefore, the elder son was hit by mistake.

"I did not because of the affair of the younger daughter only. I had been patient for several months. The wife went out every day to meet her sweetheart and she opened the door and absconded secretly during the latter part of the night while I was asleep and she would come back about 5 o'clock. I found out on several occasions that she went out at night not for the purpose of fetching water. I had warned her several times. She would not listen to the warning. Because she absconded secretly I scolded her and told her that she went out secretly, that nobody could watch her and that the night hours thought she was going out only. All that was certainly a convenience to her. She at once replied to me and admitted frankly, 'Certainly yes. Therefore I had a hatred for her. That hatred, new one, had existed for a long time.'

The trial is continuing.

SIDE GLANCES By Galbraith

"Wilbur is so thoughtful of me! He knows I make more than he does, but he insists I quit when we get married!"

EUROPEAN SENT TO GAOL FOR TWO MONTHS

At Central this morning, Mr Hin-shing Lo sentenced Edward Davies Sykes, 61, broker, to two months' gaol on six counts of uttering forged documents, obtaining and attempting to obtain money by false pretences.

Mr Lo also bound Sykes over in $500 for two years.

Pleading guilty to the charges, Sykes, tearfully said that he committed the offences when he saw all his "nine children" on the verge of starvation. "I leave it to your Worship to deal with me leniently."

Sykes, who had obtained a total of $1,500 from three firms, said he would make immediate restitution of $750 and promised to pay the balance at the end of the month.

The Rt. Rev. R. O. Hall, Bishop of Hongkong, whose name has been used by Sykes in obtaining the money, was also present in Court.

INFORMED POLICE
Det. Insp. McNiven told the Magistrate that on September 23, Bishop Hall informed the Police that he had in his possession a letter purported to have been signed by him.

After making inquiries, Police found that on September 21, defendant had delivered the forged letter to the Wang Kee Company, Connaught Road Central, and falsely pretended he had been sent by Bishop Hall to collect some money. He was given $500 and left. The letter was found to be forged and sent to Bishop Hall.

On September 24, Sykes obtained $200 from Wing On Life Insurance Company, Des Voeux Road Central, by means of a false telephone call purported to have come from Bishop Hall sending him to collect some money.

On the following day, an official of the Wing On Bank delivered a similar telephone call purported to have come from Bishop Hall and Police were informed. Defendant was arrested when he accepted a marked $100 banknote.

The local Press published the story, the officials of the Bank of East Asia, Des Voeux Road Central, informed the Police that defendant had obtained $800 by a similar forged letter and a false telephone call. Inspector McNiven told the Court that defendant had been here for 24 years and had nine children to support.

Atom-Powered Aircraft Carrier Likely For U.S.

Washington, Oct. 4. The Defence Secretary, Mr Charles Wilson, said today it "looks like" the Defence Department would authorize a "preliminary go-ahead" on the world's first atom-powered aircraft carrier.

He told reporters on his return from Denver that the atomic carrier plans being considered last year apparently would not have been satisfactory.

"But they're getting better and closer to something feasible," he added.

Mr Wilson emphasized that this did not mean the Navy would start construction on such a vessel in the immediate future. He strongly indicated, however, that plans were being prepared for the atomic carrier to take its place eventually alongside the new atomic submarine as part of the U.S. Fleet.

The Navy had wanted to proceed with the project last year but Mr Wilson cut it from the budget for economy reasons. Last October the Atomic Energy Commission approved a proposal by the Newport News, Virginia, Shipbuilding and Drydock Company to study the possibilities of using atomic power to drive aircraft-carriers.

Vital Commonwealth Trade Conference Opening In London

London, Oct. 4. More than 80 delegates representing the 50 countries and colonies within the Commonwealth were gathering today for tomorrow's opening of the most important Commonwealth trade conference for six years during which Japan's admission to full GATT membership will be debated.

The conference is to continue for about a week and will try to hammer out a joint Commonwealth policy on the future of the 34-Nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The Commonwealth delegates were meeting in advance of the ninth full session of GATT beginning in Geneva on October 28.

Many of them will be flying home to their own capitals for further talks with their Governments before going to Geneva for the crucial review of GATT, now six years old.

This week's "Family Review" of GATT's future is generally considered to be the most vital of its kind since the Commonwealth countries jointly considered their attitude to the projected International Trade Organisation in 1948.

FOUR QUESTIONS
The Commonwealth delegates have four major questions to discuss:

1. the question of Japan's admission to full membership of GATT.

2. their attitude to the world trade rules laid down in General Agreement which comes up for revision in Geneva.

3. the future of Imperial Preferences (Preferential Tariffs within the Commonwealth).

4. the trading problems which would follow if Sterling were made freely convertible into gold or dollars.

The admission of Japan is likely to prove the most controversial issue of this week's meetings—although it is far from being the most vital issue. Japan has been an associate member of GATT since October last year, and 24 nations have signed declarations regulating their commercial relations with Japan on the basis of the Agreement.

NO OBSTACLES
But Britain, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and Southern Rhodesia have hitherto declined to do so, expressing fears of unfair Japanese trading practices.

In July, however, Japan told the inter-Sessional Committee of GATT in Geneva that she believed there were now no obstacles to her joining negotiations for full membership of the Agreement.

This Committee subsequently approved a recommendation that Japan be allowed to enter multi-lateral tariff negotiations beginning next year with a view to her joining GATT.

The Geneva GATT conference will consider Japan's admission soon after October 28 before passing on the special review of GATT's future, beginning on November 8.

The Commonwealth countries are to discuss in detail all three aspects of GATT's future—its trade rules and procedures, its technical administration, its organisation, and its economic scope.

THORNECROFT TO SPEAK
This week's Commonwealth conference will begin tomorrow morning in the Treasury Building in Whitehall, with an opening address by the President of the Board of Trade, Mr Peter Thorneycroft.

It was preceded this afternoon by a short advance discussion of procedural questions.

The Commonwealth Producers' Organisation disclosed today, on the eve of the conference, that it had sent a memorandum to the Board of Trade calling on the British Government to safeguard and extend imperial preference.

The memorandum declared: "In view of the favoured treatment accorded to such island possessions as Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Hawaii by the United States, and to French and Portuguese colonial territories by their metropolitan states, this Organisation feels that the restrictions imposed on the United Kingdom by GATT are inequitable and should be removed."

AUSTRALIA'S ATTITUDE
Canberra, Oct. 4. Australia's attitude to Japan in relation to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade will be influenced by the nature of the changes in GATT emerging from the coming review. This was stated in the House of Representatives by the Prime Minister, Mr Menzies.

He said that it had been suggested that, on the eve of his departure for the GATT review session, the Commerce Minister, Mr John McEwen, had said that Australia would support Japan's admission. What Mr McEwen had said was that the admission of Japan would be "considered" at the GATT meeting and that the question was of "major importance to Australia." Mr Menzies said.

The Premier added that Japan's application to enter into tariff negotiations with the contracting parties to the General Agreement with a view to acceding to it would come up at the ninth session of the contracting parties opening at the end of October. An actual decision, even under the most expeditious consideration by the contracting parties, could not come before the middle of 1955.

Japan's accession would present problems for Australia and the other contracting parties.—China Mail Special.

U.S. Blow To Makers Of Viscount

26 Changes Sought

Washington, Oct. 4. Officials of the Civil Aeronautics Administration said today it had asked Vickers, British manufacturers of the Viscount turbo-prop airliner, to make 26 changes in the present model before it will agree to clear the plane for operation in the United States.

Permission for the Viscount to operate in the United States is expected to be delayed until at least next April as a result of this move by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, the Government agency which certifies foreign planes for flights on domestic routes.

Officials said they did not expect a prototype incorporating the changes to be ready for testing before the spring.

The delay in granting a certificate—confidently expected by now—has caused concern in Capital Airlines, the United States company, which has 40 Viscounts, costing $45,000,000 on order and an option on 20 more.

Concern is heightened by the fact that if all the changes are insisted on, one and possibly two passengers will have to be cut from the Viscount's load.

Civil Aeronautics Administration officials said today the basic design of the plane was sound but local conditions, such as extremes of heat, made it necessary for certification to be withheld.

ACCEPTED 24
They said Vickers had accepted 24 of the recommendations but wanted to consult them before going ahead with the others.

Changes accepted by Vickers include a lockable door between the crew and passenger compartments, a stronger windshield to resist the impact of large birds, and modifications to the propeller-control system, fire detection and protection equipment and fuel system pumps.

Still at issue are highly complicated methods of increasing engine power to assure safe operation at fast rising outside temperatures—conditions frequently met in tropical climates over large areas of the United States.

Civil Aeronautics Administration officials said that to meet these conditions the passenger-load would have to be cut to reduce overall weight.—Reuter.

Thailand Fears Subversion By Communist China

Washington, Oct. 4. Thailand's Ambassador to the United States, Mr. Pote Sarasin, said today the Communist China had stepped up its efforts toward subversion in Thailand since the signing of the South-east Asia defence pact in Manila last month.

He told reporters after a call on the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Walter Robertson, that the Communists were "working quietly and effectively" in training Thai and Chinese agents in China and sending them back into Thailand.

Mr. Sarasin said he had discussed ratification of the South-east Asia treaty with Mr. Robertson.

Thailand was the first of the eight participating countries to ratify the pact.—Reuter.

65 Terrorists Killed In Tunisia

About 65 terrorists were killed or wounded in a battle between the Tunisian Government and the FLN (Front for the Liberation of Tunisia) in the town of Medenine, Tunisia, on October 3.

Reported today, the Tunisian Government said the battle was fought at the town of Medenine, about 100 miles from Tunis, and that the FLN forces were defeated.

The Tunisian Government said that the FLN forces were defeated and that the battle was a significant victory for the Tunisian Government.

Persian Committee Approves Oil Pact

Teheran, Oct. 4. A Parliamentary Committee today approved by 24 votes to two the oil agreement between Persia and a four-nation consortium on resuming the marketing of Persian oil.

The Committee was appointed by both Houses of Parliament to study the agreement and report its findings as a prelude to a debate on ratification, which is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

Thirty-one British, American and Dutch technicians arrived here on Saturday to help resume operations at Abadan, the world's largest refinery.—Reuter.
